

THE DECOR

Elegance and good taste reign supreme in this old house on Long Island.

Living Room

This Long Island colonial house, built in 1930, needed a complete overhaul to adapt to the needs of its current owners. The idea was to transform the property into a contemporary and elegant home, combining functionality and style in equal parts. And boy was it achieved! The result – designed by the Tova Kook of TK Design studio – will surprise you. Will you join us?

The hall is one of the most impressive areas of the current home, with a curved staircase that makes the most of the available space and a marble tiled floor that elevates sophistication to the maximum. Details such as the curvy design console, matching the staircase, and the gold metal ceiling lamps, complete the ensemble.

For the kitchen, which features a large central island, the owners dreamed of Calacatta Gold marble, but knowing how expensive and delicate it is, they opted for a Neolith porcelain tile that perfectly imitates marble. The result? A bright and chic kitchen, with white cabinets and stainless steel appliances that create a perfect contrast between classic and modern.

Kitchen

In the main living room, curves are once again the protagonists. The sofa, armchairs and coffee tables follow this trend that softens the environment and adds an undeniable elegance.

Apart from this living room, there is a more relaxed and informal living room, with a modular sofa upholstered in sheepskin, a bioethanol fireplace built into a wall with palillería cladding, and a round dining table, more focused on everyday meals.

Bathroom

With a shower enclosure with glass screen and black profiles, French doors type, the master bathroom combines simplicity and elegance.

In the bathroom, the black color of the wallpaper adds depth and character.
